Hospice is person-centered care.

Hospice cares for the whole person - physically, emotionally, and spiritually.

For more than 35 years, hospice has helped provide comfort and dignity to millions of people, allowing them to spend their final months at home, surrounded by their loved ones. Hospices ensure that pain management, therapies, and treatments all support a plan of care that is centered on the person’s goals.
Hospice and palliative care is provided by a team of experts focused on a person's quality of life.

Hospice and palliative care is unique in that it offers an interdisciplinary team approach to treatment that includes expert medical care, comprehensive pain management and emotional and spiritual care. Caring for the whole person allows the team to address each patient's unique needs and challenges.
Hospice gives caregivers guidance.

Most families are not prepared to face the challenges that can come with a serious or life-limiting diagnosis. In addition to caring for patients, hospice offers services for families and loved ones that provide emotional support and advice to help family members become confident caregivers and adjust to the future with grief support for up to a year.
Palliative Care Can Help.

If you or a loved one is dealing with a serious illness, palliative care can help by providing the support and care you need. Palliative care delivers expertise to improve quality of life and relief from pain. It can be provided at any time during an illness – during and after treatment, from diagnosis on.

Hospices are some of the best providers of community-based palliative care. They are an important resource if you need help.
